Interesting Letter.

Political Events—The Ministry—The Queen to Open Parliament—Cholera—Cattle Plague—The Jamaica Insurrection—Immigration and Steam Tillage for Virginia—They will soon start the Old Dominion on her march again—Plan of Operations, etc.

LONDON, December 2, 1865.

Of political events now, there are few worth recording.

The surmises on the formation of the Ministry, contained in my last, have turned out to be true, and Earl Russel is slowly collecting a corps of minor officials, calculated to strengthen the Government in the estimation of his party. It is admitted on all hands that the approaching session of the Parliament will develope some decided step in the direction of reform.

The Queen has announced her purpose of opening the next Parliament in person. This is received as glad tidings by the people, and by none more so than the London shop-keepers, who see in it the first step by Her Majesty in laying aside that mourning and seclusion which she has indulged for more than three years.—The Court at Buckingham Palace, vacant these three years and upwards, will vastly increase the profits of the "May-fair" trades people.

The cholera is rapidly disappearing from the continent, and has not seriously appeared in England during its present visitation to Europe.

The cattle plague is decidedly on the increase, and it is feared by many who have studied the subject most, that it will only stop killing the beasts, when there are no more beasts to be killed.

The Fenian trials are going on in Dublin before a special commission, but they excite very little interest in people here, notwithstanding the somewhat remarkable escape of Stephens, the "Head Centre."

The popular mind in England, tutored by recent events in Jamaica, has undergone a change, as decided as it is rapid, on the negro question, in spite of the eternal clatter of the Exeter Hall and Manchester parties. Mr. John Bright and "Mr. John Bright's brother Jacob," who are now doing their best to get the authorities of that island civil and military, into serious trouble for suppressing the outbreak.

Those events in Jamaica have increased the interest manifested here about affairs in the Southern States of America. "The Times" has a correspondent traveling amongst you, and his letters give one an excellent idea of the condition of things generally, and more especially of the utter worthlessness of the "Freedmen." The remedy for this, so far as Virginia is concerned, can be seen; but with regard to those States in which the white man cannot cultivate the staples to which the people of Great Britain look with most interest, the prospect is considered rather gloomy.

Immigration, and the use of steam in the tillage of her lands, will soon start the "Old Dominion" on her march again. These two subject—twin subjects let them be called—should receive not only the serious attention of the people, but of the Legislature of the State. Should Virginia step forward this winter with anything like a liberal proposition on the subject of immigration, she will receive from England, Scotland and Wales, numbers of people, and of a class superior to that which has heretofore reached the shore of America from this country.

It will be found when the effort is made, as I hope and trust it will be, and made at once—that the present enormous price of food, growing out of the cattle plague and other causes, and the very small wages paid to the agricultural laborer of this kingdom, will be the most efficient of "Emigrant aid societies." The want of this class of labor is a grievous one with you—you are starving, so to speak, for the grain which here rots in the field. Will your authorities enter and reap? Political economists here look to emigration as the chief means of improving the condition of the farm laborer; the government and the people will encourage it, and the laborer himself seems willing enough to make the ventures. Let your planters combine and contribute to start the matter; the cost would be insignificant when the ultimate advantages to be gained are considered, and above all, let the State Legislature empower the Governor to appoint a commissioner of emigration here, and appropriate money to give "assisted passages" (that is, pay a portion of the passage money,) to emigrants of the classes most desired.

Now as to steam culture. Do not think this an untried scheme, or one impracticable for your lands. Steam is every day employed in England in the cultivation of lands just as rolling as the uplands around Richmond. One steam plough, managed by three men and two boys, does more work in a day than ten men, with ten Virginia ploughs and thirty horses or mules can do; and when the work is done it is better done, the land is more improved by the cultivation and the yield per acre greatly increased. The cost of tillage, when the keep of animals is taken into account, is about one half of the cost of horse power, and the number of horses on a farm can be reduced by this use of steam more than one-half.

Your correspondent has given this subject much attention, and he is satisfied, in view of the scarcity not only of men who will work, but of animals in Virginia, that steam tillage can be made a most valuable agent in restoring her to prosperity. The implements, by proper arrangements, can be obtained on most favorable terms of credit. A Washington gentleman has just ordered a steam plough from Messrs. Fowler & Co., to be used on a farm which he has rented in Virginia.

The farmers in England club together, buy these implements and cultivate the farms of each member of the club upon payment of an agreed price per acre. By the fund thus raised the machinery is soon paid for, and in many cases handsome dividends are being returned to the members of the club. The engines that draw the ploughs do not go upon the lands to be cultivated. They are either stationed in a corner of the field or move along the headlands. The best of them are locomotives, move along an ordinary road at about three miles to the hour, and not only carry all of their implements with them, but are very useful for traction purposes, and are capable of drawing immense loads after them. They easily ascend a grade as great as one foot in six. Besides, the engines which do the cultivating are, when not so used, not only available for hauling, but for driving threshing machines, saw and grist mills, &c. The plough is more easily guided than the horse plough, and can be stopped as quickly.—Thus obstacles, such as trees, stumps, stones, &c., are readily avoided; but if the plough happens to strike one no harm is done, as the rope, by a simple contrivance, files off the drum.

Then, the horse never gets tired, and the ground is never too hard for this plough, so that by relays of men, and a "head light" on the plough, it could be kept running the whole twenty-four hours, and the long dry seasons in summer and fall, which stop the following with you now, would have no such effect with it.

Now why should not your Virginia farmers, particularly those in the valleys of the principal rivers, "emancipate" themselves from the "freedmen" and the mules to a great extent by the use of steam on their farms?

Let them unite in clubs, representing say from two to four thousand acres of arrable lands, and bind themselves to pay in instalments, say at six, twelve, eighteen and twenty four months from the date of delivery for such implements as I have alluded to, and not only can the implements be sent out to them, but the men to work them as well.

NEW GOODS.

New Line Opened! Makes Two Trips to the Old Line's One!

A. CREECH HAS JUST RETURNED FROM the North, where he has bought his second supply of

STAPLE AND FANCY DRY GOODS,

Embracing the various New Styles of the Season, together with Ladies' Cloaks, Long Shawls, Breakfast Shawls, Ladies and Misses' Goods, Ladies and Misses' Hoop Skirts, Ladies and Misses' Balmoral Shoes, Gent's Boots and Shoes, Boys, Youths and Children's Boots and Shoes, Felt Hats, the Derby, the Dasher, the Planter's wide brim, and other styles for Men's wear. Boys', Youths and Children's Hats. Wood and Willow Ware, Crockery and Glass Ware, and a superior lot of Family Groceries.

Take my stock altogether, I have one among the largest and most desirable and complete stocks of Staple and Fancy Dry Goods in the City.

Now, allow me to say that I bought my Goods to sell, and they must and shall be sold; but I don't expect to take a piece of poetry in one hand and a full grown humbug in the other and climb up to the clouds and fish out the birds of Paradise and gently bring them down with a placard stuck on their backs, "Selling out at Cost! selling out at cost!" No, I deal in no such humbug. I keep no such a class of Goods. I keep no time worn, shelf-rubbed, defaced or dusty Goods—dust so thick you can rub it off with a knife. My Goods are all new, and of good styles, and I intend to sell them as low as anybody that bought goods with the expectation of paying for them, and the man that sold the goods to the man that don't intend to pay for them, is a fool—and the man that sells them is a rascal. Now this is plain talk, but 'tis no slip of the tongue. I mean what I say, and say what I mean. I have lived here and sold goods here for twenty years. I expect to remain here. I pay my taxes to support Institutions of the City, County and the State. I expect to continue to do so. I respectfully ask my old customers, my old friends and new ones to call and examine my stock. I will deal with you honest and treat you right. If I don't sell you goods as cheap as you can buy the same class of goods elsewhere I don't expect you to buy. Call at the R. Smith building, house formerly occupied by Creech & Litchford, Merchants and Auctioneers.

"The Sorrheads."

There are two prints in this city which seem to be catering to the sickly sentimentality of the Northern Radicals. One of these prints is by many presumed to speak by authority, and has considerable influence at home and abroad. The other is so wild and unscrupulous that it has but little respect any where. This last is however sometimes quoted with approbation by the ultra republican prints. Both these prints seem to be preparing to coalesce with those at the North which urge the continued exclusion of the Southern States from the Union, until they shall have drunk to the dregs the bitter cup of humiliation, which Charles Sumner and Thaddeus Stevens commend to our lips. It was not so a few weeks ago, at least with one of these prints. What has caused this difference? What has produced the change which has come over the spirit of their dreams? Was the Provisional Government made for them? Is power so sweet, and a little brief authority so bewitching, that they are willing to sacrifice this great State to their will? ambition? Shall we remain indefinitely at loose ends, and without the security of our old established institutions, that they may have the exquisite pleasure of lording it over the citizens of this truly loyal State? Must this state of chaos and confusion continue to rule the hour, for their special accommodation? Is revenge so sweet, that they would punish to the uttermost, and bring to a still deeper humiliation, the citizens of this great commonwealth, because a majority of them in their simplicity of heart, thought they had the right, as between two distinguished persons, to say which one they liked best?

These prints both allege that His Excellency has been too lenient in the matter of pardons.—Is it possible that the pardoning power has been lodged in the hands of any one in North Carolina? Can any one believe that it was intended to be used at home to trade on? The Governor could have been elected if he had not been "too lenient," forsooth!

It is also alleged that the majority of those who have been pardoned have been ungrateful or false to their benefactor. How ungrateful? Was this power of recommending pardons to be doled out as a favor—for which these twenty thousand dollar sinners were to be duly thankful? And does this gratitude bind them to violate their feelings—may be their consciences?—How false? Oh, it cannot be that the Governor would allow himself to be approached with a promise to support him, as the price of his official recommendation! In the name of His Excellency, for the honor of these well conditioned sinners themselves, and in behalf of this good and honest old State, we scorn and utterly disclaim and indignantly denounce the idea of such disgraceful subserviency on the one side, or desire on the other. It is not so. Gov. Holden would have kicked the man down stairs who had dared so to insult him, both in his person and office.

What then is the meaning of this talk about being ungrateful and false?

Besides, how do these prints arrive at any such knowledge? Who has told them? Who are the spies whose business it is to see how these pardoned sinners exercise the right of suffrage? Have the land engaged in the dirty vocation of seeing and reporting how people demean themselves, whether their language is respectful or otherwise to the ruling power, and above all, to watch the ballot box, and spot the rebellious wretches who are substantially charged with making base bargains, and then still more basely violating their plighted faith? This language is worse than idle. If it has no meaning. If it has any meaning, it implies a burning shame in all the actors, and an indefaceable stain on the fair escutcheon of North Carolina.

It is high time this contemptible snivelling over the late election should cease. It is pitiful, wondrous pitiful, in the more respectable of these two papers to keep it up. Everybody sees through it. Everybody laughs at its efforts to escape the mortifying dilemma. Let it pass. Gov. Holden was not elected, we know. But the world turns on its axis yet. Gov Holden is still the State, though he is a very clever and estimable gentleman in private life, which he adorns, and we hope may long live—to adorn. When we shake the Governor we do not "shake the commonwealth," and we do not intend to know how to distinguish better than that which is fit to shake like the coast and stuck up [illegible] who warned the unforgiving gods bee, that his constabulary person must not be shaken on pain of punishment for shaking the State. Let us all be wiser than we have been. We have cut capers enough. We cannot afford to be cutting them long.

Robert S. P Imrose.

We depart from our custom to notice editorially, the death of this excellent young man, whose demise and funeral we announce to day. Reared under the influences of religion, and a high toned morality and under the immediate eye of maternal watching, few have exhibited at so early an age the ripe fruits of the "good seed" which had been sown. Scrupulously truthful, full of the milk of human kindness, loving his Saviour and for his sake loving all others, we have known none to excel him in all the virtues which adorn and beautify human nature. Industrious as a bee, he was prompt at his business and ever zealous to do good—never tiring when there was something to do. Feeble and frail, he was too pure for earth—His attack was sudden, but he was ready. Suffering excruciating pain, his last words were a prayer. He was a model for the boys of the city, in truth, chastity, sobriety, honesty, industry and constant zeal to do good. We shed no tears over his bier, except for those he has left behind. He is safe!

The Confederate Debt.

It will be seen that the lower House of Congress has adopted a resolution, proposing to the States to amend the Constitution so as forever to prohibit the payment of the Confederate debt.

We are at a loss to account for the sensitiveness of the Northern people on this subject. We are sure that no sane Southern citizen has ever entertained the idea of proposing to pay the Confederate debt. Nor could such a proposition find the slightest favor in the South. The holders of Confederate bonds and bills look upon them as so much blank paper.

We doubt if any one in the Southern States would oppose the amendment, if the Northern States desire it.

The President's and Gen. Grant's Opinion of the South.

Our readers will be highly gratified with the views presented to Congress by the President of the state of feeling in the South, and the expression of his liberal sentiments in regard to the course to be pursued towards the Southern States. His views are confirmed by Gen. Grant. The General reiterates the views he expressed while here, and sustains the positions we have contended for in regard to the loyalty of the Southern people.

Congressional News.

Our Congressional telegrams will be found unusually interesting. The radicals are not inclined to abate their zeal in urging measures before Congress which serve to retard the progress of reconstruction. We are however not without hope, that the intercourse which many of them must have with the Southern delegations, will soften their asperity and incline them to a more moderate course.

Remember the Poor.

We readily call attention to the earnest appeal made to-day by our correspondent Tacitus, to the condition of the suffering poor of our city and to the many all over the State who pressingly need charity and help from those more blessed. The condition of the families of soldiers and the poor and maimed soldier strongly appeals to our sympathies. Let those who can, do what they can to relieve and help.

From the Norfolk Virginian.
"Union Sentiment in the South."

Under this caption the Baltimore American has an elaborate article which demands a notice at our hands. We shall be brief and candid.—How long and how earnestly Virginia deprecated the contest between the States and the General Government, is known to the civilized world—She sent her wisest and most illustrious statesmen, with ex-President Tyler at their head, to Washington, to negotiate a compromise, and to bind up, if possible, the bleeding wounds of the country. She had given the Northwest territory to insure its foundation. She had given the eloquence, the wisdom and the blood of her children, towards the maintenance of the doctrine—now reversed—that taxation and representation should go hand in hand. She remembered that American liberty had been achieved on those old ramparts at Yorktown, which are forever associated with the glories of her Washington. She pleaded hard for the preservation of the Union. But when she accepted the dreadful alternative of war, she put forth efforts which have won the respect and admiration of all honorable men in all quarters of the globe. And she stands up to day in the world's great Pantheon as the statute of Fortitude.

When the struggle ended, with a courage not less conspicuous in civil than in military affairs, she came forward with an honorable candor, and accepted the decree of arms. She knew, none better, that there was neither dignity nor discretion in protracting an unavailing struggle—Her position has been taken and will be maintained in good faith. Her people desire a restoration to the rights and privileges which belong to them of right; and in return are prepared, as they have abundantly shown, to discharge their duties in every relation and in all honesty—This is her political attitude. The people of the South, lately in arms, share these sentiments and concur in this action; and their "manhood," accord to General Grant is worthy of respect.

There is another aspect to the question. It has its historical expressions. In the historic merits of the case, the people of the South are a unit. They can appeal to high authority to show that in endurance and valor, they have not been unworthy their ancestry. They have given their private fortunes, and the lives of their children to the lost cause, and can never admit the truth of the American's opinion, that "names associated with the revolution will ever become as odious as that of Tory." Remote generations will syllable the names of Jackson, Johnston and Lee. They are respected and admired at the North. They will continue to be; and, as for the people of the South, while they will be true to their plighted faith, they will, for all time, admire and revere the great names of their great leaders. They will be "household words" with the American people; and when, in some happy future, the late war is looked upon as the war of the Roses is now regarded in England then the virtues and achievements of the men whose names we have mentioned, will be held in a joint trust of honor, with those of the most loyal by the American Republic, as synonymous of American valor, endurance and virtue.

For the Sentinel.

The Standard is still floundering about in a most distressing search after the reasons for the defeat of His Excellency in the late election. Like a blind snake, when Sirius rages, when dogs are hydrophobic, and snakes lose their eyes and their senses generally, this eccentric hebdominal, maddened and monstruck, strikes fore and aft, and on either side, hoping in its blind rage to hit somebody, and fasten upon him its poisonous fangs.

Much may, and much should be pardoned, to filial affection. But it is most lovely at the fireside, not in the field. It has its own dominions, and there it is sacred. Even in the political arena, it may not be too severely scanned. Let it not be too cruelly scoffed at if indiscreetly protruded even there. Under such circumstances, it is by no means a sin, but only an amiable weakness. It may however, be laughed at and become subject of jest to the profane scoffer—should it ostentatiously leave the warm domestic circle and go traipsing about in the cold among rude men, where it does not belong. Above all, let no one dare to trade on filial affection.

The true reasons for this lamented defeat are well enough known to all, except the small circle that surrounds his Excellency's political table, and gathers up its crumbs. It cannot be presumed, at least, it would hardly be respectful to presume, that the Governor himself either authorizes or encourages the strange delusions on that subject which are ventilated with such ludicrous gravity in his paper. He certainly knows, however mortifying that knowledge may be, that his own personal unpopularity is the cause, and the only "causa causans" of the two disastrous Waterloo defeats which he has witnessed with so much pain, in the last two elections.

The Standard has attributed Waterloo the first, to the terror of Confederate bayonets.—Well, it had control of the bayonets in the second campaign. It was not scared out of its senses then. It even threatened in dismal Jeremiads that great damage would ensue, in case of its failure. Many are thought to have voted for the Provisional Governor against their choice and convictions, under the stringency of this vaticination. Stronger language than this may be used. Every well informed man in the State knows with the exception of the circle aforesaid, and one or two innocents, unsophisticated and amiable young men, who have not yet learned so much as they will have learned in a few years if they live and improve their opportunities as hopeful youths should—that the Governor was not elected because he did not get votes enough—and that he failed in procuring a sufficient number of votes, because the people did not like him—and could be persuaded to love him, coax he never so wisely; nor scared into pretending to prefer him, however adroitly they were threatened.

The Standard thinks His Excellency was too lenient, and that Jupiter should have bared his arm so that all should see his power, and be terrified thereby. He should have unwrapped the wreath that concealed the shining blade, and exposed the naked sword in all its glittering terrors. That may have been best, and if that had been done, the result might and probably would have been different. If the people had known Governor Holden's election to be necessary to their restoration to the Union, that thing would have been done, as a part of the programme. To be sure the Governor would have been able to boast of only a lean vote. But his friends would have had the field all to themselves. The remaining thousands would have quietly staid at their homes, and submitted to the necessity. But they did not know it; and they did not even believe it. There was at least the appearance of a free election. Hints were indeed abundantly spread about of "going in" and "staying out," but they were believed to be the coinage of the Standard mint, and issued on its own hook—and for its own peculiar use. If Andrew Johnson had stamped the coin, and is image and superscription had appeared, it would have passed current and W. W. Holden would have been Governor elect. So much did we all wish to be restored to the Union, that we would have swallowed even that. We would have enlarged our œsophagus and crammed it down. Little cared we for Governor Holden, or Governor Worth, compared with the great object of our restoration.—But having a free choice, we voted as we pleased, and for the man we loved best. The filial young gentleman, who has been lately the victum of so many mortifying extravaganzas in his paper, has added no laurels to his youthful brow as a statesman, or keen observer of men. If he chooses filially to thrust his head in the sand so that he cannot see, let him not suppose that others whose eyes are open will not be able to trace results to their legitimate causes. It is well that filial affection should turn away and blind its eyes to parental infirmities. There is high authority for such respectful and blushing aversion in the classics so lately studied by the young editor, and it is very pleasant to know that these are not forgotten. But there are sceptics abroad who will say, if they are not suppressed, what North Carolina knows—and always will know, and prove also whenever occasion offers, and there is proclaimed to be a free fight—that the Provisional Governor, with all his acknowledged ability as a writer, with a name above reproach for personal integrity and honor, with manners sufficiently winning, and a large heart for public and private charities, can never be Governor elect.

The reasons for this hostility to Gov. Holden lie in the past. He has always been a strong friend to his political associates for the time being, and as bitter a foe, to all to whom he was at the time opposed. His friends and enemies have so often changed places with relation to him, that his fortune has been to have, at some time, every eminent man in the State for his enemy. While so, this enemy has never been spared. All have in their turn been alternately praised and abused. Unfortunately for the Governor, by some perversity of human nature, the language of personal insult is written in brass, when the sands only contain the record of the language of praise. The praise is forgotten.—The insult stings and rankles and is neither forgotten nor forgiven. This is the true reason why Governor Holden has not succeeded, and can never succeed, in a free election in winning the votes of the people of North Carolina. When we have a sufficient reason, it is idle to seek for another. So says a great philosopher. It is worse than idle to state reasons feigned and false. The people of our good State had no disloyal designs in electing Gov. Worth. Those who voted for him, are at this day more loyal than those who did not—if we judge of loyalty by an ardent desire to be again re-united. We are now ready to go back. How strange that now our "Strait" friends are crying out "not yet." Why not, now? You were ready a few weeks ago. So were we. So are we now. But where is Sawney? Back again! Does our Governor, like Gov. Johnson of Georgia, ask to be relieved from the cares and perplexities of office—and desire that the wheels of his State should move along in the good old way? Does he now proclaim, what he certainly must know to be true beyond the shadow of a doubt, that we are ready to prove the loyalty we have all along professed? Is not North Carolina as loyal as Georgia? Is she not the most loyal State in the whole South? If there is truth in man she is just that thing.

Q.

The full vote for Governor in S. Carolina was as follows: James L. Orr, 9,776; Wade Hampton, 9,169. Majority for Orr, 607.

For the Sentinel.

Mr. Pell:—Will your readers permit their attention to be diverted from fruitless political discussions, for a moment, to attend to a few suggestions which are not inferior in practical importance, and which will not excite their interest to tantalize them with a sense of their utter impotency? Let such as will, hear.

The holy festival which celebrates the most auspicious event in the world's history, is drawing nigh. Everywhere are seen the preparations for that season of merry-making, feasting and gaiety. But not everywhere will the feast be made, and the laugh of exuberant happiness heard. While the children of wealth are enjoying the good things of earth by the genial blaze of the Christmas log, forgetful of the piercing blasts that whistle around their comfortable dwellings; and even their servants are revelling upon the provisions of the kind master's bounty; while the homes of competency are enlivened by the sound of music and mirth, and plenty smiles on the profusely covered board and in the well filled wood-house; that very wind, the shrill whistling of which only heightens the sense of comfort within these favored abodes, may be playing in cruel wantonness with the ragged clothes, and freezing the half-clad limbs, of some shivering wretch who, standing "out in the cold," aggravates the keen gnawings of his own hunger by peering at the inviting feast, spread within—alas! so unattainable to him! Certainly there are in the State—aye, in this city many wretched dwellings—to call them "homes" sounds like mockery—where the snow, which looks so beautiful through the window, will be whisked in by the cold, and wind, and scattered over the bed, the floor and the hearth, quenching the few expiring coals which are the last remains of the last stick of fire-wood; while the poor widow, or the wife of an improvident husband and her little children huddle around, drawing nearer and nearer to the cooling embers. And as certainly, in such abodes, and on the streets, to those who have no shelter, Christmas will bring no joy, because it will bring no bread.

Is this a fancy-sketch? The writer is conscious of no motive that could prompt him to make such a one. It is certainly not an agreeable picture to contemplate. But little reflection is necessary to convince every one of the probability, nay the certainty—of much suffering among our people this winter. The supply of provisions is confessedly short in this section; and, for many reasons, the amount necessary to secure exemption from want will be greater than usual. The small surplus raised this year is either held by the producer to enable him to support an increased number of laborers to cultivate cotton next year? or stolen and wasted by the thieves infesting the country; or bought and hoarded by speculators, with a view to profit from the high prices which the future scarcity will cause. And even that which is offered in the market is beyond the reach of many consumers, by reason of the exorbitant rates demanded for it, and the scarcity of money: credit is out of the question. For similar reasons much suffering from the want of fuel may reasonably be apprehended among the poor.

A large proportion of the sufferers will be the widows and orphans and other dependent relations of Confederate soldiers, who have fallen in the public service, or have been so maimed and disabled as to become a burthen instead of a support to their families. By the result of the war these have been excluded from the benefit of that generous provision which a grateful country makes for its defenders who survive, and the families of the fallen. But their claims upon their countrymen are none the less strong and just, because the sacrifices they have made, and the hardships they have borne, were made and borne in vain, and what the State ought to have done under different circumstances, but cannot or will not do under those that exist, individuals should do to the extent of their ability. The debt is due, and should be paid in one way or another. It is a burning shame that any one in this land—and more especially any one who has kept out of the war to amass wealth, while others were fighting and bleeding in his defence—should live in luxurious abundance, while a Confederate soldier or his family is straitened for the common comforts and necessaries of life.—Defeated we have been, and to some extent humiliated, but let us not be dishonored and disgraced by such an exhibition of base ingratitude.

Some, it is feared, will excuse themselves lightly from the discharge of duty upon the plea of inability. Contrasting their former condition of opulence with their reduced state since the result of the war has swept away so much of their wealth, they conclude, probably, that they are absolutely poor, when they are only relatively so. We should not let our misfortunes make us mean. We have suffered in common with our countrymen, our common adversity should cause us to sympathise with, and assist one another. The true measure of our duty is our ability, and each should fairly test his ability by the question, "Can any family live comfortably on less than they now consume?" If the answer is affirmative, all that is spent above the requirements of an economical standard of living should go to supply the wants of our poorer neighbors:—it belongs to them. No man has a right to waste in riotus excess or wanton extravagance that which is necessary to the comfort of another, and every mouthful of food, every cent of money now in this State is necessary—if indeed there is a sufficiency for the support of its population.

This is no appeal in behalf of any particular charity, or any benevolent association. It is better, where it is convenient, that every man should be his own almoner. Look among your neighbors, see who is in want, and supply that want yourself as far as you can, "not letting your left hand know what your right doeth, and He that seeth in secret shall reward you openly." Ah, the blessed reward of such a work the Christian will surely not despise nor underrate.—If ordinarily, "it is more blessed to give than to receive," how much more profitable and pleasant will it be now in this time of spiritual death and famine, where not only the weak in the faith are falling away, but the earnest and sincere Christian feels that God is at a great distance from him. There, then, is a rare opportunity not only of securing that satisfaction that springs from the consciousness of the performance of duty, but of restoring the religious health of the soul, reviving our languid piety, renewing the delightful communion with our Heavenly Father, and kindling the smouldering zeal of the Church, by exercising that divine grace of charity which is the very life and soul of our most holy religion.

December 18, 1865 TACITUS.

POLITICAL ANIMOSITIES.—The New York Express, in referring to the condition of the Southern States, says:

One needs but to look at the Southern State governments to be convinced of the strange and unnatural positions they present, and of the necessity of providing a remedy for them. Many of the States have double headed Governors—Governors elected by the people, and Governors appointed at Washington. South Carolina has two, North Carolina two, Georgia and Mississippi—and we know not how many others, have two each. In Louisiana, the Provisional Governor and the State Governor are the same person, but the Provisional Governor holds on to the Federal appointment. Governor Wells was to have been inaugurated in the Louisiana Legislature a few days ago, but failed to come to time.

DIED,

In this City on Tuesday morning, 4 o'clock, ROBERT S. PRIMROSE, son of the late John Primrose, of congestion of the brain, in the 19th year of his age.

The friends and acquaintances of the family are respectfully invited to attend his funeral from the Presbyterian Church this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

CITY AND STATE ITEMS.

Concert and Tableaux.

The young folks of the Baptist Sunday School will give an entertainment at the chapel of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind this [Wednesday] evening, commencing at seven o'clock.

The exercises will consist of vocal and instrumental music, tableaux, &c, and promise to be quite interesting. An admission fee of 50 cents will be charged. As the proceeds will be applied to a good purpose, we hope to see a full attendance.

MURDER WILL OUT.—We learn that our Chief of Police, Mr. Parker, getting a clue to the murder of Mr. Fort, has arrested a man named Sugg, under strong suspicions of being connected with the murder.

GAS.—Our city fathers have again resolved to have our streets lighted with Gas. This is a good idea. We think the gas lights are worth about fifteen policemen, i. e., lighted streets render the safety of the city as certain as fifteen policemen.—Our police should be stationed on every street.

CITY EXPENSES.—The expenses of the City are enormous. Yet what is necessary for its safety and comfort must be provided at any price. We beg the city fathers to look well however, to the utility of their expenditures. The day of reckoning will come, and it is well that they shall be able to show that money has been judiciously expended. We learn that the city watch alone costs $45 per night. At that price the whole city should be preserved from every species of outrage.

THE SERENADERS.—We learn that some of the boys were found out rather late on Monday night, on the plea of serenading. The police thought their discordant notes were not very wholesome and took them to the guard house. Ten o'clock is late enough now for any noise upon our streets. Matters are becoming too serious even for serenading at a late hour. The boys however, were not put in.

FARMING.—Our Eastern Counties open a fine field for enterprise in the cultivation of cotton.—People who want to make money, can do no better than rent or buy an Eastern County farm.

WARRENTON FEMALE COLLEGE.—This institution resumes its exercises, on the 24th of January. It is a popular institution. The last scholastic year there were 112 pupils.

SELECT MALE SCHOOL.—See the advertisement of Rev. C. M. Cook's select male school in Warren County. It is a good place for boys.

Wilmington Items.

The press of Wilmington pay merited tributes to the late James Fulton, editor of the Journal.

The Baptists of Wilmington, are making arrangements for a festival. It is now in progress, and the ladies have many nice things for sale. The object is a benevolent one.

The Herald says that the New Hanover Court House is one of the filthiest places in North Carolina. Doubted. There are more filthy places than that, and the Wake County Court House it is likely, is one of them.

BUSINESS.—The merchants of Wilmington are driving ahead. The shipping indicates trade.—Regular packets to several points are running.—Our columns will show the reader, the names of business houses.

Newbern Items.

THEATRE.—We observe that the Newbernians have a theatre in full blast. Glad they have money enough to spare for amusements. We judge the showmen who have visited Raleigh, have gone off badly used up. Some at least go off in debt to printers and hotel keepers.

BUSINESS MEN.—Newbern we are glad to learn is still driving ahead. There are a number of driving business men there. There are our friends Whitford, Dill, & Co., John F. Foard, J. D. Flanner, Mitchell and Allen, Faucette & Bro., W. H. Oliver & Co., and others. We see our old friend John Blackwell has returned and commenced business again. We wish them all good luck.

PEOPLE'S MARKET.—An Association at Newbern it appears has established a people's market and propose to rent the stalls. The idea is a new one in North Carolina, but it shows energy.

Wm. C. Loftin, has been removed from the office of Collector of Newbern. Cause not assigned. His successor has not been named. Mr. L. could certainly take "the oath."

OLD CITIZENS.—We are glad to see that the old citizens of Newbern are generally returning. They love the old town. Dr. Hughes, we see has resumed practice, in connection with his son, Dr. J. B. Hughes. Many others are there. May their shadows never grow less.

Senator Doolittle, of Wisconsin, in his speech on Tuesday thus sketched Thaddeus Stevens and his recent action in the House. He said:

By the published proceedings of that assemblage, it seems that on the first Saturday in December, without any discussion whatever, a certain resolution, which reads, word for word, just like this resolution which is sent here from the House, was adopted in that caucus, under the leadership of a certain gentleman whom I will not speak of as a member of the House, but as one known to history, who resides in the State of Pennsylvania. His history is known of all men, and one thing we know of him—he is most bitterly and uncompromisingly hostile to the policy of the present administration on the subject of reconstruction. He goes with him who goes furthest, holding even that the State of Tennessee was an alien State at war with the United States; and if I am not mistaken, in the convention at Baltimore which nominated Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Johnson for President and Vice President, Thaddeus Stevens objected to the nomination of Andrew Johnson because he was an alien enemy. I have seen nothing of the history of that gentlman to lead me to suppose that he has in any respect changed his opinion, for it is not long since I read a speech of his, delivered in the State of Pennsylvania, marked with his usual ability, and with that cool assurance that sometimes rises to the sublime, in which he proposed, if I do not mistake, almost the entire and universal confiscation of the whole Southern States. Now Mr. President, with the doings of that assembly in connection with this resolution, I feel at perfect liberty to speak without violating the rules of this House. I will simply say that within three minutes by the clock of the hour when that assembly was called, Thaddeus Stevens had moved his committee on resolutions, and was withdrawing with his committee from the body to make his report. Within ten minutes, without any discussion, without any consideration whatever, it was, by that cool tact of his, pressed through the body, declaring it to be unanimously adopted. Why this hot haste? What necessity for such hot haste? Sir, who does not know that the leader of that caucus did not desire to wait—nor did he wait—until the President had spoken to the country in his annual message on the state of the country?

Congress.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.

Mr. Wilson offered a resolution providing for the appointment of an examining Board to relieve officers of the regular army who have not rendered meritorious services in the late war, and to fill their places by appointments from the regular veteran reserves and volunteer forces.

It was resolved that Congress listen on the 12th of February, to the address of E. M. Stanton on the late President Lincoln, and that the President, Cabinet, foreign ministers and officers of the army and navy who have received the thanks of Congress, be invited.

HOUSE.

The House went into committee of the whole on the President's message, and Mr. Stevens made a speech, the point of which was to give the blacks the rights claimed by the declaration of Independence, and place the South in a territorial condition with the view to their subsequent admission as free States.

The credentials of Jas. M. Johnson member elect from the third district of Alabama were presented and referred to the committee on reconstruction.

Mr. Price of Iowa, offered a preamble stating, as an attempt may come in some shape to repudiate the National and assume the rebel debt, therefore resolved, that no representative from the States be admitted until an amendment is made in the Constitution, precluding such results. Referred to the committee on reconstruction.

Mr. Moulton offered a resolution calling upon the President to inform the House why Jeff Davis had not been tried for treason. A resolution also passed declaring that the test oath will not be dispensed with.

New York Markets.

December 18.

Cotton dull—sales of 1400 bales at 49 to 50. Gold at 1.46¼.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.

SENATE.

A resolution was offered calling upon the Secretary of War for a detailed statement of the numerical strength of the regular army.

Mr. Trumbull gave notice of a bill to enlarge the powers of the Freedmen's Bureau so as to secure the freedom of all persons in the United States, and protect any individual in the full enjoyment of the rights of person and property, and furnish him means for his vindication.

A message was received from the President in relation to the condition of affairs in the South, in which he says, from all the information in my possession and from that which I have recently derived from the most reliable authority, I am induced to cherish the belief that sectional animosity is surely and rapidly merging itself into a spirit of nationality, and that representation connected with a properly adjusted system of taxation, will result in a harmonious restoration of the States to the national Union.

The President also furnishes a communication from General Grant, in which that officer says, he had full conversations with the people of the South during his recent tour, and is satisfied the people have accepted the situation of affairs in good faith. Gen. Grant also says, there is such unusual acquiescence in the authority of the general government throughout the country visited by him, that the mere presence of a military force without regard to numbers, is sufficient to maintain order. He says the good of the country and economy require, that this force should be white troops.

HOUSE.

Mr. Farnsworth offered a preamble and resolution instructing the committee on elections to examine into the alledged disloyal statements of Mr. Norris of Maryland, and report the same to the House, together with such action as they may recommend. Adopted.

A resolution was adopted in the House by more than two-thirds majority to submit to the Legislatures of the several States, an amendment to the Constitution forever prohibiting the assumption of the Confederate debt.

Mr. Seward to Gov. Jenkins.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.

The Secretary of State has addressed a letter to the Governor of Georgia, transmitting a copy of the communication addressed to the late Provisional Governor of that State, relieving him of that trust and tendering the co-operation of the government of the United States, whenever it may be found necessary to protect the State of Georgia.

Uncle Toby and the Hornet's Nest.

A correspondent of the Norfolk Virginian has revived the following old story, which every body has heard. It is however amusing enough to keep it afloat.

There is an old colonial church in the "Northern Neck" of Virginia, which stands on the right of the main road. It is surrounded by a graveyard containing a few tombstones, where sleep some of Virginia's mighty dead; not mightier men, however, than their decendants, whose bones, alas, rest not with those of their forefathers, but whiten many a remote battle field.

After the revolution, the Episcopal Church almost ceased to exist in Virginia, and this building was abandoned to decay. The old belfry became a habitation for owls and bats, and while its English bricks withstood all attacks of the elements, the rain poured through the roof and rotted the floor. The glass and sashes had long been destroyed; the windows were rudely planked up, and such was the condition of the edifice, that it was only used in fair weather during the warmer season, when it was free to any who chose to occupy it.

Our story is dated in the summer of 184—.

Notices had been stuck up at the court house and the cross-roads that the Rev. Tobias Wiggins, a somewhat celebrated divine of the "Hard-shell" persuasion, would preach the next Sunday. This gentleman was commmonly called "Uncle Toby" by the younger people of the county.

The devil had got into some lads living near the church, and they resolved to play a trick upon Uncle Toby. Accordingly half a dozen assembled early in the morning in the graveyard, went off a few rods into the bushes, found a hornet's nest, put a shingle under the hole, and carried it into the church. Having raised the rotten planks behind the old reading desk which served for a pulpit, they placed it upright just under where Uncle Toby had to stand, leaving a wide space behind the old planks.

They then stuck a fish-hook into the nest, carried the line far away under the floor, and thrust it up through a hole in another part of the church, where they generally sat.

About ten o'clock the people began to come to the "preachin;" and about eleven Uncle Toby entered, accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Lucinda Wiggins, a portly dame of some fifty winters.

After the ordinary singing, &c., 'Uncle Toby' began his sermon. It was about Saul, David and Jonathan. In reference to the "evil spirit" which tormented Saul, he said: "My brethren, be careful how you depart from the literal meaning of the scriptur. This "evil spirit" has bothered many learned commentators; but to me it is jest as plain as Lucindy's face yonder. Jest stick to the literal; evil means bad, and sperret means whiskey; so Saul was crazy from drinkin' bad whiskey; and if a feller, who could get as much of the best London Dock yet preferred to get crazy on rotgut, he wasn't fitten to be King over Israel.

And, brethren, who was David? He was a fine young feller, and the ladies admired him very much. At this time of his life he was endeavorin' to make his election sho' over Israel; an' it seems that he was a cap'n of infantry as you will read in the 22d chapter of I Samuel, and 2d verse.

And who was Jonathan? He was the son of Saul, and a great friend of David, whom he loved mo' nor I love Lucindy; that is the literal interpretation of what David himself said about him. Jonathan was in the service too, an' a Cap'n of Artillery, as you will see by the literal reading of the 20th chapter of 1st Samuel, and 40th verse.

Now, brethren, you must not live like Saul, and drink rotgut; but like David and Jonathan you must make your election sho', and you will all get to glory! glory!! glory!!!

Here the boys pulled the fishing line, and turned over the nest. The hornets rushed out in a swarm up Toby's nankeen pants, and stung him horribly. He started from the desk, yelling: "Glory in my soul, but h—ll fire in my breeches! Run, Lucindy, and tuck your coats, close round your legs!" and away he rushed up the road.

"Uncle Toby" was laid up sick by the inflammation; but the boys kept mum. He never found out the trick; but to the end of his life he never entered the old church again.

NEGRO [PRACTICAL] VOTING.—The following items are afloat, showing the way the experiment works.

The negroes in New Orleans were much puzzled with the elective franchise. A letter from that city says:

To day is election day. So I do not have to leave the levee to talk with the sable laborers of these fields, for they are strung along, returning from the "polls," sober and thoughtful, with the puzzling association of a franchise, which they fancy they have to-day, in sincere practical reality, exercised in company with their masters. Of course it is to be expected many of them "go it blind."

"Yes, massa, I done voted."

"Well, who did you vote for?"

"Dunno, massa; I done jis as the man told me dat gub me de pass. I put it in."

"Pass! what pass?" Oh, he means the ticket?" It looks like a pass to him of course. He sees my smile, and after a moment's silence, adds, to show the honesty of his intention—a good will capable of good work.

"I put dat paper in, massa, for Uncle Sam, God bless him, whoever he is."

AN HONEST ADMISSION.—The Republican papers, now that the war is over, and its passions have somewhat subsided, occasionally let out facts about it that they used to conceal or deny while the struggle was progressing. For instance, the New York Evening Post says:

"We have done much, in spite of appearances, to reduce our national wealth by the war; we are now less industrious in productions and more extravagant in consumption than ever before, we are burdened with a debt vaster in proportion to our wealth and numbers than has ever been paid by any nation; and this debt is in terms almost the worst possible for control. Our national credit in the market of the world is lower to-day than ever a civilized nation's has yet been, save when followed by general disaster and repudiation; and steadily falling lower, month by month. And the prospect before us, presents very fearful difficulties to avert it, is, that the engagements of the Treasury within the next three years must far exceed its possible resources."

NEGRO SUFFRAGE.—It is a well established fact that a majority of the States and an overwhelming majority of the people of the United States are opposed to negro suffrage. A decent regard for this sentiment and verdict of the people, expressed even in New England, the stronghold of Abolitionism, should forbid any opposite legislation by Congress in regard to territory that is the common property of the States. Nevertheless there is little doubt that negro suffrage will be forced upon the people of the District of Columbia. Possibly this will induce a concentration of the black element at Washington, and the Radical members will then be in their glory.—N. Y. Express.

THE WOUNDS.—The Newberne Times says: We regret very much to hear that Mr. Dawson Bonner, died on Thursday evening last, from the effects of a pistol shot wound, received in connection with Mr. Geo. Taylor, of that place some time since.
